Young Polar Bear emerged from her den with a great yawn. The bright white snow of the ice cap made her eyes water. She sneezed twice and breathed in the warm air of the spring. “This air is a little heavy and hot,” said Young Polar Bear.

As she walked toward the bay, the air became hotter. The sun rose higher and reflected off the white snow of the ice caps. Water dripped into pools, and Young Polar Bear’s heavy steps left prints in the soft snow. “This heat!” Young Polar Bear growled. “I’ve never felt anything like it.”
